

coffee & tea

"Although coffee was probably being roasted in Australia as early as 1938 by a small company called Quists, the first real movement towards commercial coffee roasting began in 1954. In that year, three young Italian immigrants by the names of Monaci, Coperchini and Panettieri formed the company Mocopan to deal in smallgoods, spices and coffee. A few years later their company was transformed by the Dimattina family. They began to roast imported beans locally – thus carving out a huge competitive advantage over companies that imported roasted beans. The Dimattina family continue to be a huge name in coffee in Melbourne and beyond."
